The sixth annual CANstruction event has been announced for Oct. 10, and signups are open.

CANstruction is a competition using canned goods and other non-perishable food items to build a 10-foot cubic structure. It's shown to the public, judged, then taken apart and the food donated to Food Finders, which will distribute it to agencies that help those who are food insecure.

This year's theme is Dr. Seuss, and for the first time ever, the contest will take place at MADE by Millworks downtown. There are only six spaces open for this competition.

The final call for entries is Thursday, Aug. 15, and the entry cost per team is $395.
